How it Works	Cow Chip Bingo is a game that pits your luck against the gastronomical actions of a cow. In a field containing a roaming cow, your luck will be based on where the cow will do "what comes naturally." Each deeded square costs $20. If the cow deposits her "chip" on your deeded square, you win the grand prize. Any disputes will be decided by a predetermined judge who will make the final determination.
Deeds/Squares	Prior to grazing, land deed/ticket numbers will be randomly assigned to the marked field, which is divided into a grid.
Rules of the Game	The cow will be released at 2:00 pm and roam until it deposits the winning chip. If the cow does not deposit a chip by 6:00 pm, the event committee will conduct a random drawing to determine the winner. In the event the plop completely crosses the border into one or more squares, the prize will be split among those deed holders. The decision of the designated event judge on the winner(s) is final. Owner of the deed does not need to be present to win, and the money will be awarded by check.
